60 I quite agree that we need not introduce in our Emigration Regulation the protective provisions that apply to emigrants from the State to places outside British India as under Section 31 of the British Indian Act (Act VII of 1922), The - - British Indian Act applies to them also. But it is necessary that we must have a Regulation containing provisions auxiliary to the British Indian Act. The need for a Regulation in Mysore was fully explained by the late Mr. H. V. Nanjundayya, who was then First Member of Council in his speech introducing the Mysore Emigration Bill (Regulation I of 1913) and the need has not become any the less since that time. The facility for emigration is greater now than before and the interests of emigrants from the State should be fully protected by an auxiliary Regulation taking full advantage of protection afforded by the British Indian Act and permitting recruitment in the State on the same lines as those recognised by the Law in British India.

63 The Dist. of Dhc is of opinion that it is necy. to regulate emigration of labour ~~outside~~ into British India ~~the State~~ for the very reasons given in the late Member's Speech introducing the Emigration Bill. The Object of the Emigration Regulation I of 1913 was to regulate emigration ~~out of Mysore in respect of~~ minors & married women within the State and to control the activities of recruiters licensed for recruiting emigrants by competent authorities in British India. The Regulation did not provide for grant of original licenses by Govt. or any subordinate authority to any body for the purpose of recruiting within the State. In the Govt. of India Emigration Act ~~of~~ as amended in 1922 there is no mention of "Recruiters" and there is no provision in it for grant of licenses for purpose of recruitment. ~~This material was~~ The Dist. 66 The Director of I & C stated that it is necessary to have an independent Regulation in this State containing provisions auxiliary to the British Indian Act with a view to adequately safeguard the interests of emigrants from this State. The need for having an auxiliary Regulation in this State was explained by the late Mr. H. V. Nanjundayya, when the present Regulation itself was proposed to be introduced. The Director's views appear to be completely acceptable and it seems necessary to amend our law immediately, so as to bring it into line with the British Indian Law.

67 The question is in what directions the law should be amended; considering the importance of the problem of emigration, it seems necessary that the scope of the law should be such as to enable Government (1) to regulate emigration from the State and (2) to safeguard the interests of emigrants to the extent possible.

68 In this view the following changes and additions to be made in the law appear to be desirable

(1) The scope of emigration should be extended to include both skilled and unskilled work, the former being strictly ~~deprived~~ defined as in the British Indian Act, It will be seen from the British Indian Law that elaborate provisions are made to control and safeguard emigration of skilled labour, which ~~xxxxx~~ problem may become of increasing importance in the State also in the near future.

NOTE—Contn. sheet.

WD 066—GPB—30,000—26-7-29

(2) Section 3 of the present Regulation will have to be amended so as to extend the prohibition to ports ~~xx~~ also not notified by the G.G. (Section 9 (1) of British Indian Law) in addition to the countries as now notified (Section 109 British Indian Law) The scope of this Section should combine both skilled and unskilled work.

(3) In ~~view~~ lieu of the existing sections 4, 5, 6, ~~16~~, 7 and other connected sections of the Mysore Regulation which have to go, provision should be ~~xxx~~ made for the appointment of a protector of emigrants whose jurisdiction may perhaps extend over the whole State in our case. (vide section ~~3~~ 3 of the British Indian Law). The Labour Commissioner may probably be the Protector of Emigrants also. His duties will be similar to those laid down under Section 4 of the British Law, Clauses c & d being ~~admitted~~ omitted.

Sections ~~5~~ 5, 6, 7 and 8 of the British Indian Law appear to be unnecessary in our State.

(4) Power to suspend emigration of unskilled workers for special causes and for revocation of prohibition seems necessary and provisions similar to 11 (1) and 12 with modification to include cases notified by the G.G. or a local Govt. under Sections 11 (1) and (2) of the British Indian Law, may perhaps be introduced in our Law.

(5) Emigration of skilled workers will have to be controlled and regulated by the adoption of provisions similar to Sections 16, 17, 19 and 20 of the British Indian Law.

~~6~~ If approved, the papers may be forwarded unofficially to the Director of Industries and

3 There is no doubt that the Regn of 1913 requires amendment. But before deciding on the Modifications to be made I should like to know the extent of emigration of labour annually from the State. Have we any statistics of the no of labourers who emigrate? As the existing law is inapplicable in some respects in view of the changes made in the British Indian law on which it was based I want to know how the law is now being worked, if at all

Our Regulation I of 1913 was auxiliary to the Indian Act of 1908. The present Regulation will therefore have to be amended so as to make it auxiliary to the new Indian Act.

GENERAL SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MYSORE,

SIR,

In continuation of my letter No.701/27 dated 11th August 1927 in regard to the submission of draft rules under the Emigration Regulation, Regulation I of 1913, I have the honor to state that I have made a careful study of our Regulation I of 1913 and the Indian Emigration Act, Act VII of 1922. The Mysore Regulation is based on the older Indian Act of 1908 as amended in 1910. The New Indian Act of 1922 applies to Emigrants from Indian States after they arrive in British territory (vide Section 31 of Act VII of 1922) and as the emigrants from Mysore are mostly to territories outside British India it is necessary that the Mysore Regulation should not be in conflict with the Indian Act in order that is lawful in respect to a Mysore Emigrant contemplating service outside India, should not become unlawful as soon as he arrives in British territory which he has to pass through before he arrives at his destination.

Section 4 of our Regulation requires that in cases where a license is required for recruitment in British India, no person should recruit in Mysore unless he, possesses a license issued by the Protector of emigrants granted under section 16 of Act XVII of 1908. But under the new Act of 1922 the protector of emigrants does not issue any license at all, the licenses for recruitment being issued by the Emigration Commissioner, a paid servant of the state, to which labourers labourers are recruited, to whom no reference is made in our Regulation. Again the old recruiter employed on behalf of the Employees of labour no longer exists and recruitment is now required to be carried on by the Emigration Agent, a Public servant discharging his duties under the orders of the Emigration Commissioner. Apart from the entire change in the agency of recruitment the Indian Law introduces a number of provisions in regard to the emigration of Females, Minors, and Unmarried men which will have the effect of making what is lawful in Mysore unlawful as soon as such emigrants arrive in British territory. These provisions cannot be introduced in the rules as they would then conflict with the Regulation under which they are purported to be passed. I am of opinion that in regard to matters such as Emigration it is desirable that the Mysore Regulation should be entirely on all fours with the law for the time being in force in British India and that consequently the Regulation existing at present in Mysore cannot be worked without bringing it into conflic with the law in British India resulting in inevitable inconvenienc and hardship to emigrants from Mysore. I venture to consider that under the circumstances the Mysore Regulation cannot be worked and should be brought into conformity with the law in British India before rules can be issued under the Regulation.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

C Ranganatha Rau Sahib
Director.

2. As regards the extent of emigration of labour outside the State, the Deputy Commissioners who were consulted report that no statistics are being compiled and that it is not possible therefore to say how the Regulation of 1913 is being worked.
